About the Technical Seminar

We organized the technical seminar, "Industry Relevant Software," to enhance the knowledge of Aerospace Engineering students. The program was started at 11.00 am with the welcome speech, and the resource person handled an interactive session about providing global exposure in the industry-relevant software. The resource person concentrated on highlighting the following points:

- The primary objective of software in the aerospace industry is to optimize performance, enhance safety, ensure regulatory compliance, and drive innovation across various stages of the product lifecycle. By utilizing software tools, aerospace companies can reduce costs, improve operational efficiency, and maintain high standards of safety and reliability, which are crucial in this highly complex, high-risk sector.
- To support the development of aerospace products (aircraft, spacecraft, and related systems) by providing advanced simulation and modelling tools.
- Software tools help automate documentation, testing, and reporting processes to maintain compliance and ensure product safety, which is critical in the highly regulated aerospace industry.
- To provide the software that powers and controls flight systems, ensuring optimal performance and safety of aircraft.
